Gracious Eyes

Ken Sande

Years ago I completed a particularly sad divorce mediation. The husband had tried for years to meet his wife's expectations, but she was adept at finding fault with everything he did.

Shortly after our final meeting, I read an article in Country Magazine in which M.G. Creight described her husband with wonderfully warm and admiring words. I couldn't help but imagine how differently my divorce client would have described Mr. Creight, had she been his wife instead.

To give you a glimpse of the difference between these two women, here are the actual words Mrs. Creight wrote about her husband, contrasted with the kind of words (indented italics) that my client would have probably used to describe the same man.

"He exudes the strength and perseverance of a man; other times he is a fun-loving boy. Usually he's a combination of the two, the best of both."

I don't know how much longer I can stay married to this man. Sometimes he's so childish it embarrasses me!

"His habitat is the out-of-doors, with brief refueling stops at the kitchen table."

He's always working, so we don't spend much time together—except when he plunks down at the dinner table and expects me to feed him.

"His britches in winter are shapeless cords, the kind that go whoop, whoop when he walks. In summer, his jeans are faded, the knees more so."

I can't stand the way he dresses. He has no taste at all for proper fashion, and he's always walking around in worn-out clothes.

"He's more concerned with the contents of his pockets than the label on the back one. Those pockets hold an amazing collection of useful things: tape, bolts, wire, a pocketknife and maybe a length of baling twine. With them, he can tame an unruly machine or critter, mend a broken fence, remove a stone from a sore hoof, graft a tree, even patiently coax a reluctant calf from its mother's womb."

His pockets are always filled with junk that I just can't get him to throw away. It's embarrassing when we're shopping and he reaches into his pockets for change and has to pile all his junk on the counter.

“He concentrates on things that grow ... digging, planting and tending the earth ... and the earth responds to his husbandry.”

His hands are always dirty. I've told him a hundred times not to touch me until he's washed. Fortunately, he finally got the message and learned to keep his distance.

“He knows the woods, fields, and the bog where the deer hide on hot summer afternoons. Then there's the hidden stream where silver minnows flash. He'll take you with him and show you. There's no need to ask—just tag along when he leaves.”

Just when I need him, he's wandered off somewhere. He gets absorbed in his frivolous hobbies when he should be inside helping with household duties.

“This country cupid may not attend many opening nights with you. But he will wake you early and point to a magnificent sunrise.”

I can't ever get him to take me out, even for the opening night of a special movie or play. And when I go out myself and want to sleep in the next morning, he still gets up early and has the nerve to wake me to see the sun come up.

“He may not send you roses. But he will plant a bush of fragrant ones near the kitchen window without telling you.”

I can't remember the last time he did anything romantic, like sending me roses. All he thinks about are the plants in his yard.

“Anniversary dates he may not remember. He lives by the season, not the calendar.

In spring, the first dog-toothed violets will appear long before you noticed them ... all the better to surprise you with a bouquet of them lying nestled in his hat, carefully wrapped in a scrap of damp moss, on the bench by the back door when you go out to sweep the porch.”

He forgets our anniversary half the time, and rarely buys me a gift. Then he can't understand why I'm not excited about some wilted violets he picked from the yard and just left on the porch.

“He's a country valentine, and a country girl wouldn't have him any other way.”

He just doesn't understand what a woman needs. I've tried to be patient, but I deserve better than this. I can't help but dream of trading him in on a man who knows how to love a woman.

Exactly the same man, but seen through very different eyes.

What kind of eyes do you have for the people around you?

May they be eyes that see others through the gracious filter of Philippians 4:8-9:

Finally brothers, whatever is true, whatever is noble, whatever is right, whatever is pure, whatever is lovely, whatever is admirable—if anything is excellent or praiseworthy—think about such things.... And the God of peace will be with you.

Reflection Questions: (Most effective when shared with a friend; James 1:22-25)

- How does the gospel change the way God looks at you? (John 15:15; 2Cor.

5:17; 2Thess. 2:13)

- How is the gospel changing the way you look at others? (Col. 3:12-15)
- Why does the apostle Paul say that the God of peace will be with people who view others graciously? (Phil. 4:8-9)
- If people know you look at them with a critical eye, how will they feel when they are around you?
- How would your relationships be different if others sensed that you viewed them with gracious eyes?

Physical Safety at OGBC

God is concerned about physical safety. Laws governing the affairs and conduct of the nation of Israel demonstrated that safety was a concern to God. For example, in Deuteronomy 22:8, the law reads: "When you build a new house, you shall make a parapet (retaining wall or railing) for your roof, so that you will not bring bloodguilt on your house if anyone falls from it." In addition, God promised the Israelites physical safety if they obeyed His commandments. If they obeyed, they would dwell in the land in safety (Leviticus 25:18-19; 26:3-5; Deuteronomy 12:10). In the New Testament, numerous times in the book of Acts, the physical safety of Paul is mentioned (Acts 9:25; 17:10; 19:30; 23:10).

This principle is applicable to the church; namely, us also (Romans 15:4). So, as a church, it is our goal to promote safety as well. We need to continue to look and watch out for one another, especially those who are younger among us. Towards that end, as elders, we would request these safety measures to be observed.

#1 – When you walk outside through the main doors in the downstairs lobby, there is a nice hill on your left. We would request that children and adults refrain from running down that hill onto the sidewalk.

#2 – As you continue down that sidewalk and come to the driveway (before you come to the stairs up to the parking lot), we would request that no child be allowed to play in the driveway or to cross back and forth. This is because cars come down the hill to pick up children and the driver may not see a child in the driveway. This will become even more important as daylight diminishes in the days ahead.

Finally, #3 – When the chairs are set up in the auditorium, we would request that all of the balls stay put in the back room and running is limited.

We appreciate your mindfulness of these requests, as we work together to promote safety at the Orrville Grace Brethren Church. So, if you see a child in potential danger, please intervene in a biblically appropriate manner for their safety (good) and the glory of God.

FUNNIES

A preacher, while driving through the country stopped and said to a farmer by the road, "Are you a Christian?" The farmer said "No, I am a Jones, Christian lives down the road about a mile and to the left about a quarter mile." "No, you don't understand," said the preacher. "Are you lost?" "Nope," replied the farmer, "I've lived here going on 43 years, and know every nook and cranny hereabouts." The preacher scratching his head, said, "Are you ready for the judgment?" Jones answered, "No, when is it?" Disgusted, the preacher finally said, "For you, it may be Tuesday or Wednesday. "Good," said the farmer Jones, "I'll tell my wife, she will want to go both days !"

Spiritual Dilemma: What does an atheist do when he drives up behind a car with a "Honk If You Love Jesus" bumper sticker, and that car refuses to move when the light turns green?

By the time Bobby arrived, the football game had already started. "Why are you so late?" asked his friend.

"I couldn't decide between going to church and going to the football game. So I tossed a coin," said Bobby.

"But that shouldn't have taken too long." said the friend.

"Well, I had to toss it 35 times."

A man fell into a pit and he couldn't get out.

BUDDHA said: "Your pit is only a state of mind."

A HINDU said: "This pit is for purging you and making you more perfect."

CONFUCIUS said: "If you would have listened to me, you would never have fallen into that pit."

A NEW AGE PERSON said: "Maybe you should network with some other pit dwellers."

A SELF-PITYING PERSON said: "You haven't seen anything until you've seen my pit."

A NEWS REPORTER said: "Could I have the exclusive story on your pit?"

A FEDERAL BUREAUCRAT said: "Have you paid your taxes on that pit?"

A COUNTY INSPECTOR said: "Do you have a permit for that pit?"

A REALIST said: "That's a pit."

An IDEALIST said: "The world shouldn't have pits."

An OPTIMIST said: "Things could be worse."

A PESSIMIST said: "Things will get worse."

BUT JESUS, SEEING THE MAN, TOOK HIM BY THE HAND AND LIFTED HIM OUT OF THE PIT.

Socialism can put a new suit on a man, but Jesus can put a new man in the suit.
